land tenure

188 House owned by builder & inherited by owner's eldest son. Land on which house stands belongs to owner of house only as long as house remains standing (Gibbs, Contr. N.A. Ethnol. I, 1877, 186: Puget Sound rules in general recognize no ownership of land exc. that occupancy - house site belongs to individual as long as he leaves any evidence of a building on it)

occupancy - a house generally close relatives

Comparative notes

214 a. Puget Sound tribes - usually go back to same fishing grounds each year, but have no claims to grounds as such. Have name villages

b. Farther up coast - village groups, except in Quileute have more clearly defined ownership of fishing stations and berrying grounds.

Hoh - Quillayute q. S. Vancouver I: every gens has own fishing grounds - chief acts as owner

Klallam chief has traps on river - allows others to use when he not using

Taquahan family has own hunting grounds
